Message from the Regional Director

Dear Colleagues, Partners, Prospective Students, and Alumni, The first quarter of 2025 has been a season of momentum and meaningful milestones for the University for Peace – Africa Programme, and I am delighted to share some key highlights and exciting developments with our growing community.

We began the year on a high note with a graduation ceremony in Mogadishu, Somalia, on 24 January 2025, where 79 postgraduate students received their certificates.

This moment was more than a celebration of academic achievement; it was a powerful testament to the role of education in fostering leadership, hope, and peace in post-conflict societies. In response to the increasing demand for accessible, relevant, and globally informed education, we launched new Doctoral, Master's, and professional certification programmes at our regional hub in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

These programmes are designed to equip emerging leaders with the knowledge, skills, and values needed to shape Africa's peace and development agenda. We also entered a strategic partnership through a Memorandum of Understanding with Management International University in London, to offer a Joint Executive Master's Programme.

This collaboration enriches our academic offerings and expands opportunities for students seeking internationally recognized, practice oriented postgraduate education. Moreover, the revamp of the UPEACE Africa website marks a significant step toward strengthening our digital presence and making information more accessible to our regional and global audiences.

Warm regards,

Professor Samuel Kale Ewusi

Regional Director, University for Peace – Africa Programme

Who We Are!

The Africa Programme at the United Nations University for Peace (UPEACE) was established in 2002 with a strong focus on enhancing the capacity of various African stakeholders in the domains of peace, conflict governance, security, and development. This initiative primarily aims to strengthen the capabilities of African regional institutions, universities, research institutes, governments, and civil society organizations.

The programme emphasizes teaching, training, research, and publications, all directed towards fostering sustainable peace and development on the continent. It is part of UPEACE's global network, which includes regional offices in Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia), Europe (Netherlands and Switzerland), Asia (China/South Korea), and Southeast Asia (Manila, Philippines). These regional offices facilitate collaborative work and regional outreach, ensuring that UPEACE's mission and expertise reach global contexts while also emphasizing the specific challenges and opportunities unique to each region.

Through its activities, the Africa Programme focuses on the development of African solutions to African challenges, seeking to engage various stakeholders across the continent in creating more stable, just, and peaceful societies. This engagement includes research on pressing issues such as conflict prevention, governance, human rights, disaster resilience, and humanitarian action. The program also seeks to foster inter-institutional cooperation and strengthen the linkages between academia, policymakers, and practitioners in the peacebuilding field.

With a network of academic partnerships, UPEACE Africa facilitates capacity-building initiatives such as postgraduate education, specialized training, and policy-oriented research, all tailored to the African context. Moreover, the Programme contributes to policy dialogues through conferences, publications, and collaborative research, addressing emerging issues in peace and security, while also contributing to advancing Africa's role in global peace and security initiatives.

UPEACE Africa Director Champions African Peace and Security at T20 Africa High-Level Policy Dialogue

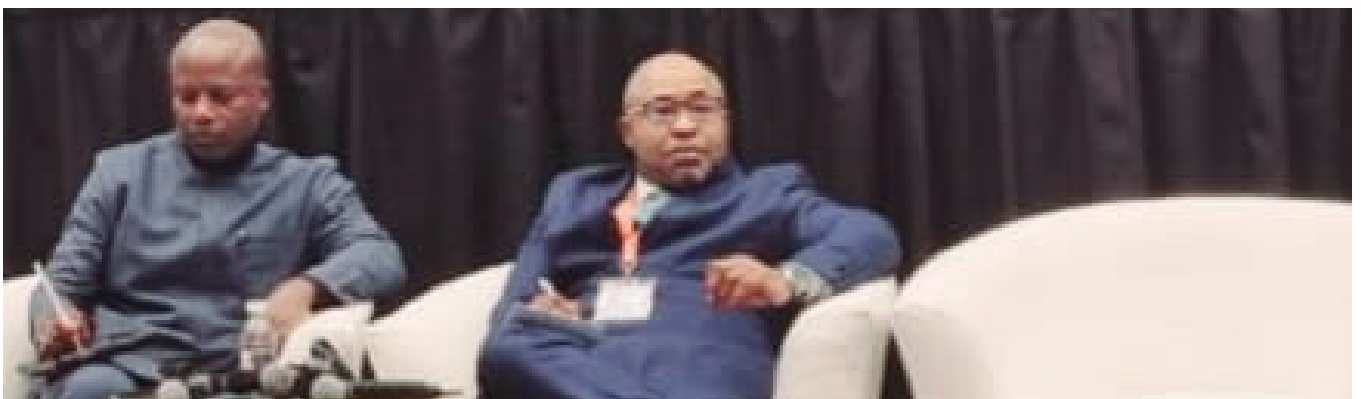

The University for Peace (UPEACE) Africa Programme proudly participated in the recent T20 Africa High-Level Policy Dialogue under the theme “Strengthening African Agency in the G20 within the Emerging Global Order.” This timely and strategic gathering brought together a distinguished cohort of African policymakers, think tanks, academics, and global experts to reflect on Africa’s priorities and articulate a shared vision for the future.

At the heart of this influential dialogue was the UPEACE Africa Director, who delivered a powerful intervention on “Confronting the Challenges of Peace and Security in Africa in the Emerging Global Order.” His presentation focused on the complex dynamics shaping the continent’s peace and security landscape and emphasized the need for African-led responses grounded in contextual realities and regional solidarity. With the African Union’s recent accession to permanent G20 membership & South Africa’s current G20 presidency, her message resonated strongly with calls for Africa’s greater voice in global governance.

The Director’s contribution aligned with the broader aims of the dialogue: to amplify African voices, drive robust policy discussions, and develop well-informed, Africa-centric recommendations for the global policy agenda. Core themes included inclusive economic growth, sustainable development, and global governance reforms—all integral to building the African futures we collectively envision.

More than a convening of experts, this dialogue served as a participatory space for strategic planning, innovation, and bold thinking—rooted in African agency and ownership. The UPEACE Africa Director’s insights underscored the importance of homegrown solutions and intercontinental collaboration in securing a peaceful, prosperous future for Africa.

UPEACE Africa is honoured to have contributed to this high-level platform and remains committed to advancing Africa’s role in shaping global peace, security, and development discourses.

Celebrating Peace builders: UPEACE Africa Graduation Ceremony 2025

Marking World Education Day with Purpose, Diversity, and Impact

On 24 January 2025, the University for Peace – Africa Programme hosted a significant graduation ceremony in Mogadishu, Somalia, coinciding with World Education Day—a powerful moment that underscored our commitment to inclusive, transformative, and equitable education for all. The event celebrated the achievements of 79 postgraduate students. These dynamic students successfully completed their rigorous academic training and field engagement in key areas of peace, governance, development, environment, Blue economy and human rights, humanitarian action and leadership. This diverse group represented Cameroon, Uganda, Senegal, Ethiopia, and Somalia, reflecting UPEACE Africa’s ongoing dedication to fostering pan-African collaboration and empowering leaders who are committed to sustainable peace and development across the continent.

This year, the University for Peace Africa Programme (UPEACE Africa) proudly graduated a distinguished cohort of students, marking a significant milestone in their academic journey. Among them were 25 doctoral graduates from the PhD in Peace, Governance, & Development programme. These graduates have conducted groundbreaking research on critical governance systems, peacebuilding strategies, & conflict resolution, positioning themselves as transformative leaders ready to influence policy and peace initiatives across the globe. In addition, 54 Master’s graduates completed their studies across UPEACE Africa’s core MA programmes, further strengthening the next generation of leaders in the fields of peace, governance, and sustainable development. This diverse and accomplished cohort exemplifies UPEACE Africa’s commitment to fostering thought leadership and transformative change in Africa and beyond. These academic offerings demonstrate UPEACE Africa’s holistic approach to education, combining global perspectives with local realities to equip students for leadership in Africa’s peace & development sectors.

An African Celebration of Global Significance

The graduation ceremony, set against the backdrop of Mogadishu’s recovery and renewal, was not just a celebration of academic achievement, it was a statement of the transformative power of education in regions emerging from conflict. For many students, the ceremony held deeper meaning, serving as a reminder of the critical role their work will play in shaping the future of peace and governance across Africa.

“Graduating on World Education Day in Somalia is more than symbolic—it’s a declaration of what education can achieve in regions striving for peace. These graduates represent the future of African-led solutions to African challenges.”

Professor Samuel Kale Ewusi, UPEACE Africa Programme Regional Director

Voices of the Graduates

During the ceremony, graduates shared inspiring personal stories of perseverance, growth, and their aspirations for their communities. Many highlighted how their time at UPEACE Africa not only shaped their academic journeys but also solidified their identities as peacebuilders, leaders, and public servants dedicated to advancing peace in their respective regions. Among them was Dr. Saleiman S. Umar, the Director General at the Ministry of Finance in Somalia, who spoke about the impact of his education on his commitment to fostering peace and stability in Somalia. Expanding Access to Transformative Education New Doctoral, Master's, and Professional Programmes Launched in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia

In a bold step toward addressing Africa's complex development and peacebuilding needs, the University for Peace – Africa Programme has launched an expanded suite of academic offerings at its regional hub in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

This new portfolio includes Doctoral, Master's, and professional certification programmes tailored to the evolving realities of peace, governance, environmental sustainability, humanitarian leadership, and human rights in Africa. Developed in response to the growing demand for accessible, relevant, and globally informed education, these programmes are structured to empower the next generation of leaders and practitioners with both the academic depth and real-world tools to drive impact.

"We are committed to ensuring that education in peace and development is not only theoretical but deeply practical and grounded in the lived experiences of African societies," said Esther Lum Ndutu Ph.d , Programme Manager UPEACE Africa.

With an emphasis on interdisciplinary learning, field-based research, and regional collaboration, the new programmes aim to bridge the gap between global scholarship and local action, giving students the opportunity to co-create sustainable solutions within their communities and beyond.

Prospective students can explore the new programme offerings on the updated UPEACE Africa website at www.upeace-africa.org

UPEACE Africa Partners with London-Based University for Joint Executive Master's Programme

A Strategic Collaboration to Elevate Postgraduate Education Across Borders and Sustainable Development

The University for Peace – Africa Programme has signed a landmark Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Management International University (MIU) in London, paving the way for a Joint Executive Master's Programme that promises to reshape the landscape of postgraduate education for African professionals and beyond.

This strategic partnership is rooted in a shared commitment to delivering practice-oriented, globally accredited postgraduate education that is accessible, flexible, and future-facing. The new Executive Master's Programme will offer professionals a hybrid learning experience combining international expertise, African contextual relevance, and leadership development across sectors.

"Through this collaboration, we are expanding the academic horizons of our students and offering a truly global learning experience," said Professor Smauel, Regional Director of UPEACE Africa.

"It's about cultivating leaders who think globally, act locally, and innovate boldly."

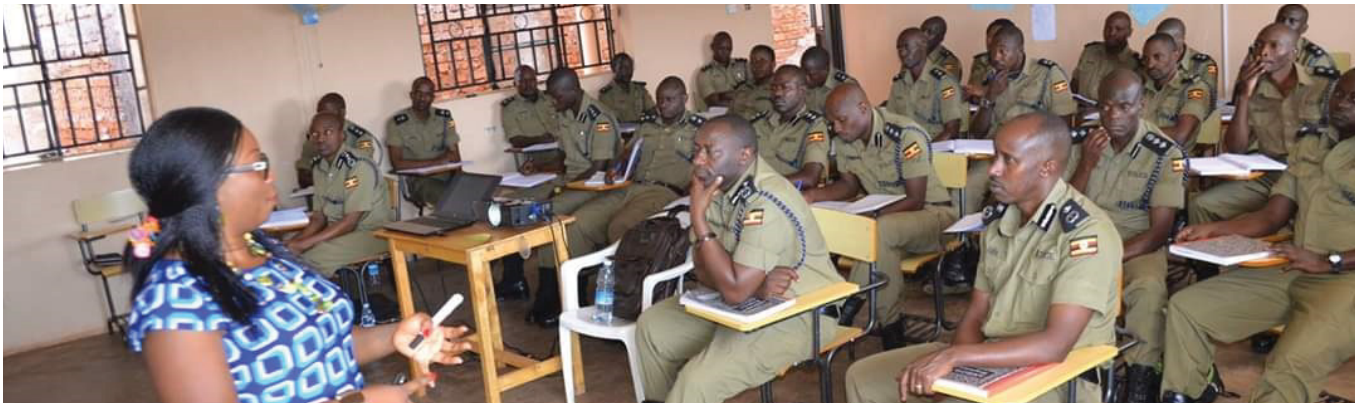

The programme is set to attract mid-career professionals, policymakers, civil society actors, and peace-building practitioners eager to enhance their credentials and contribute meaningfully to Africa's sustainable development goals.

More details on admission timelines and course modules will be shared via the UPEACE Africa website and newsletter.

UPEACE Africa Partners with CMES Morocco for Strategic Collaboration

A Strategic Collaboration to Elevate Postgraduate Education Across Borders and Sustainable Development

On November 11, 2024, the University for Peace Africa Programme led by Professor Samuel Kale Ewusi, Regional Director, and the Centre for Strategic Studies Morocco (CMES), under the leadership of Professor Mohammed Benhammou, President, signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) in Rabat, Morocco. This landmark agreement marks a significant step toward strengthening cooperation in the fields of peace, security, & sustainable development. The MOU outlines a robust framework for both institutions to collaborate on joint academic programmes at Master's and Doctoral levels, with a focus on peacebuilding, governance, and human security. The partnership also covers the development of professional training courses aimed at equipping emerging leaders with the practical skills needed to address Africa's most pressing challenges.

Moreover, the MOU fosters the co-management of research projects and the exchange of expertise on issues of mutual interest, enabling both institutions to contribute meaningfully to policy debates and sustainable solutions in the region.

"This partnership reinforces our shared commitment to advancing peace, security, and sustainable development," said Professor Samuel Kale Ewusi, Regional Director of UPEACE Africa.

"By combining our resources and expertise, we can make a tangible impact on the future of Africa and the broader global community."

The collaboration between UPEACE Africa and CMES aims to enhance cross-regional academic exchange and offer students and researchers opportunities to engage in groundbreaking research, advance their careers, and shape the policies that will influence the future of peace and development in Africa and beyond.

As UPEACE Africa and CMES continue to develop joint initiatives, students, scholars, & professionals are encouraged to stay connected for upcoming opportunities in training, research, and academic programmes. For more information on the partnership and future engagements, please visit the UPEACE Africa website.

Strengthening Diplomacy and Peacebuilding: UPEACE Africa and the Ethiopian Institute for Foreign Affairs Collaboration

In a significant step toward fostering stronger regional cooperation and promoting effective diplomacy, the University for Peace Africa Programme (UPEACE Africa) and the Ethiopian Institute for Foreign Affairs (EIFA) held a productive working session in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. The meeting, held in January 2025, brought together experts, academics, and practitioners from both institutions to explore and deepen their collaborative efforts in key areas of security, peacebuilding, and conflict resolution.

Collaboration Focus: Training Young Diplomats

A primary focus of the working session was the training of young diplomats, with an emphasis on equipping the next generation of African leaders with the skills necessary to navigate the complexities of international diplomacy, peace, and security. Both institutions recognized the importance of building diplomatic capacity across the continent, particularly in areas critical to Africa's long-term stability.

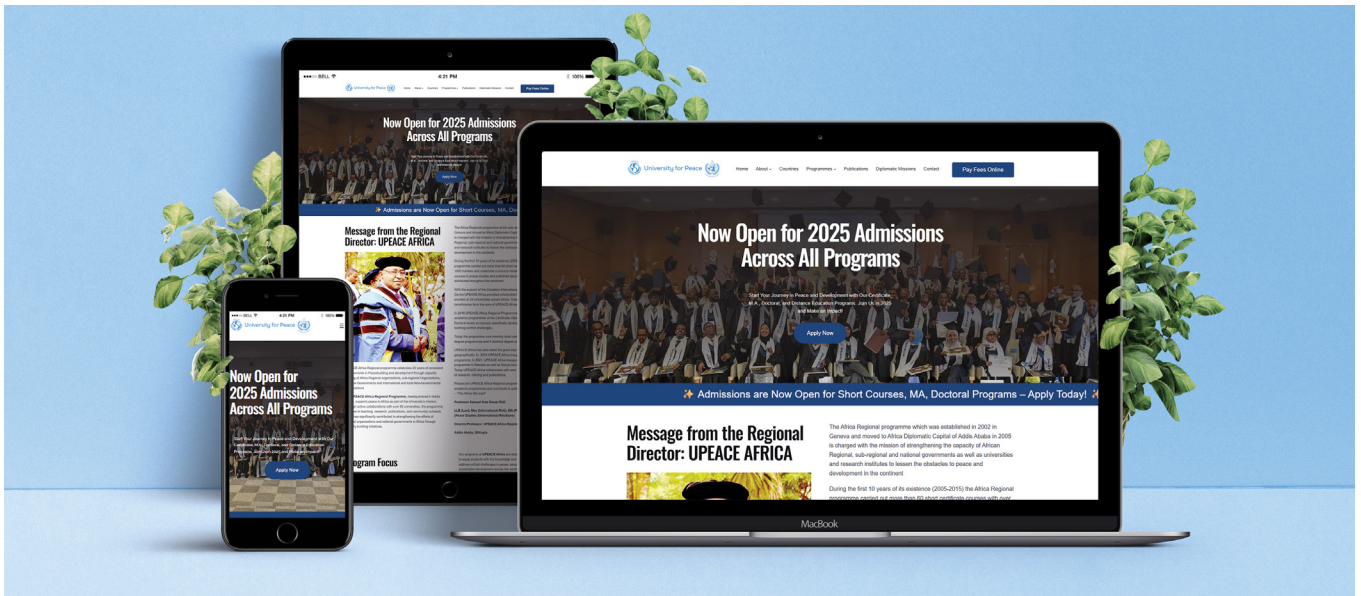

UPEACE Africa, with its commitment to fostering peace through academic excellence, and EIFA, a key institution in Ethiopia's foreign policy development, agreed to collaborate on specialized programs designed to enhance the diplomatic acumen of emerging African diplomats. These programs will address pressing challenges, from security issues to conflict management, with a focus on regional cooperation and multilateral diplomacy.

Key Areas of Focus: Peace, Security, and Conflict Resolution

The working session highlighted several areas of mutual interest in the domains of security, peace, and conflict resolution. As both institutions are deeply invested in promoting sustainable peace in Africa, they discussed collaborative initiatives aimed at tackling regional conflicts, strengthening security frameworks, and providing practical solutions to mitigate the effects of political instability.

UPEACE Africa Website Gets a New Look Revamped Digital Platform Enhances Access, Engagement, and User Experience

In today's digital-first world, accessibility and seamless user interaction are essential. The University for Peace – Africa Programme has officially unveiled a newly revamped website, designed to serve as a central hub for students, alumni, faculty, partners, and prospective applicants across the continent and beyond.

The redesigned website features a clean, modern interface with improved navigation, making it easier to explore programmes, admission requirements, research initiatives, news updates, and apply programs online. Visitors can now effortlessly learn about academic offerings, faculty expertise, and ongoing peace and development initiatives led by UPEACE Africa and most importantly apply online courses of their choice.

"This new platform is more than a facelift—it's a strategic tool for connection, visibility, and academic impact," said Omar Farouk, ICT Manager at UPEACE Africa.

New Online Payment System Launched

A key milestone accompanying the launch is the introduction of UPEACE Africa's online payment system, now live at <https://payment.upeace-africa.org>. This secure platform allows students to conveniently pay tuition and related fees using credit cards and PayPal, eliminating geographical and logistical barriers to payment.

"This advancement reflects our commitment to improving student services and expanding access," Farouk added. "It marks a significant step in streamlining the enrolment process for both current and future learners."

The updated site also includes a built-in newsletter subscription feature and an alumni story submission portal—fostering deeper engagement and storytelling within the UPEACE Africa community.

We invite you to visit the new digital home of UPEACE Africa at www.upeace-africa.org—where peace meets innovation and education becomes a movement.

UPEACE Africa Programme Launches Upcoming Short Courses and Welcomes New Degree Applications

The University for Peace (UPEACE) Africa Programme is pleased to announce the launch of its 2025 professional short certification programmes, designed to equip aspiring professionals and leaders with essential skills in peace, governance, international relations, and development.

Kicking off on May 5th, 2025, the first course—"United Nations System, Careers, and Engagement Opportunities"—will provide participants with a deep dive into the structure, functions, and pathways to careers within the UN and related international organisations.

Following this, a robust schedule of short certification courses will continue from June through December 2025, covering key topics such as:

- Economic Diplomacy and Global Trade Policies
- Managing NGOs for Social Impact
- Diplomacy and International Negotiation Strategies
- Gender, Peace, and Development
- Human Rights, Humanitarian Law, and International Justice
- Climate Change, Environment, and Conflict
- Project Management for NGOs and International Organisations

These intensive short courses, lasting between two to three weeks, are tailored for professionals, students, and early-career diplomats. With flexible schedules and affordable fees ranging from $250 to $350, the programmes are designed to fit seamlessly into the busy lives of participants while delivering high-impact learning.

In addition to the certification courses, admissions are now open for UPEACE Africa's highly respected Master's and Doctoral degree programmes in Peace, Governance, and Development. The university operates a rolling admissions policy, with intakes in January and September, offering limited slots for each cohort to ensure academic excellence and personalized mentorship.

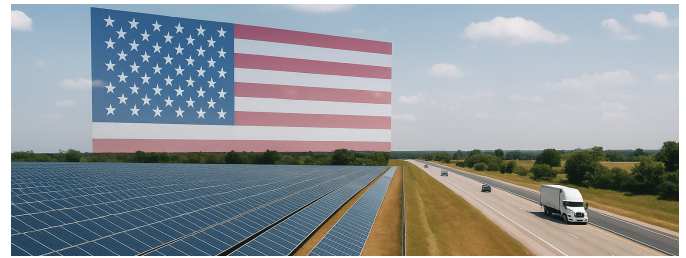

Prospective students and professionals interested in applying for any of the programmes can find detailed information and application guidelines on the official UPEACE Africa Programme website.

This is a unique opportunity to join a globally recognized institution committed to building peace through education, research, and leadership across the African continent.

Policy Corner: Trump-Era Policies and Their Ripple Effects on Africa's Economy

By Esther Lum Ndotu.N Ph.D Fellow University for Peace Africa Programme.

The return of Donald Trump to office in 2025 ushered in a fresh wave of policy changes that are reshaping Africa's economic landscape. Among the most impactful has been the reintroduction of steep reciprocal trade tariffs—up to 50%—on exports from 22 African countries. This policy, aimed at reducing the U.S. trade deficit, placed unprecedented strain on the African Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA), which for years enabled many African nations to access the U.S. market duty-free.

Key economies like South Africa, Nigeria, and Kenya have felt the brunt. South Africa's automotive exports now face a 31% tariff, threatening thousands of jobs and weakening their industrial base. Kenya's agricultural products, particularly tea and flowers destined for the U.S. market, have seen declining demand due to higher prices, impacting smallholder farmers and exporters.

Simultaneously, the Trump administration's proposed elimination of the U.S. Bureau of African Affairs & significant cuts to foreign aid programs have diminished American development presence on the continent. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), once a cornerstone of the U.S. health response in Africa, saw major funding reductions, while support for humanitarian programs in Somalia, South Sudan, and the Sahel region was significantly curtailed. These cuts have strained public health systems, education programs, and refugee support initiatives at a time when climate-related crises and conflict are escalating humanitarian needs.

The Trump administration also pushed aggressively for access to Africa's strategic mineral resources—including cobalt, coltan, lithium, and rare earth elements—essential for electric vehicle batteries and advanced electronics. U.S. firms have expanded operations in mineral-rich countries like the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), but critics warn of exploitation risks, lack of transparency, and worsening socio-environmental impacts in already fragile regions.

Compounding these challenges is the broader economic uncertainty fueled by the "America First" doctrine. Trade tensions with China disrupted global supply chains and slowed foreign direct investment into African economies. Nigeria, reliant on oil exports, experienced a dramatic slump in revenues following global oil price fluctuations, while South Africa saw reduced capital inflows, a weakening rand, and investor caution amid U.S. policy unpredictability.

In response, African nations are proactively strengthening economic self-reliance and diversifying partnerships. The African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA), launched in 2021, is gaining momentum as countries work to reduce internal trade barriers & increase value-added production. Kenya and Nigeria, among others, are ramping up bilateral cooperation with China & the European Union, targeting infrastructure, renewable energy, and digital technology sectors as key growth areas.

While Trump's policies have exposed the vulnerabilities of Africa's economic dependence on Western powers, they have also accelerated a long-needed pivot toward regional integration and south-south cooperation. As Africa positions itself for a more assertive role in the global economy, strategic autonomy and inclusive development will be critical in ensuring resilience and long-term prosperity.
